General comments
Restoration is rarely mentioned, and needs to be explicitly stated, not just inferred within “conservation”, “sustainability” or other terms. This is critical given the need for consistency with the other conventions, the 2050 Vision for Biodiversity, and the upcoming UN Decade on Ecosystem Restoration (2021-2030). In addition, the failure to recognize and encourage restoration is inconsistent with the intent and substance of the original Aichi Targets, the CBD’s Short Term Action Plan on Ecosystem Restoration, and its ongoing investment in supporting high quality ecosystem restoration to achieve the CBD’s long term objectives. If the CBD is to achieve the 2030 targets and 2050 vision, restoration must be explicitly recognized as a core component of the post-2020 Global Biodiversity Framework,

[Current levels are not sustainable. Sustainable yields are only possible following recovery through restoration.]
